Notes from the Editor

Carlos S. Maldonado

Colleagues from throughout the US contact me in my role as Editor of "Noticias de NACS." They send me information and news items and request that we include them in the newsletter. Some of these news items reflect issues which the Chicano/a community is addressing locally or regionally.

A news item that I feel is important to continue to highlight in our newsletter, relates to the Chicano Studies situation taking place at the University of California, Santa Barbara.

Several colleagues from the University of California, Santa Barbara have kept me informed about the crisis confronting Chicano Studies. This crisis has evolved from actions which the university’s administration has set in motion impacting Chicano Studies.

The following is an editorial statement written by Rafael Perez-Torres and Chela Sandoval, colleagues at the University of California, Santa Barbara's Chicano Studies, which appeared in the Santa Barbara New-Press on November 27, 1994.

The authors have granted NACS permission to reprint their statement. I believe that their concise statement highlight some of the critical issues negatively impacting the University of California, Santa Barbara’s Chicano Studies.

Freedom, not Intolerance, at Issue by Drs. Rafael Perez-Torres and Chela Sandoval, Chicano Studies, UCSB.

We were disappointed in the recent News-Press editorial on the Chicano Studies Department at UCSB. The editorial bluntly dismissed the genuine concerns of those committed to academic freedom and the development of a strong Department of Chicano Studies.

The department not only serves to address the educational needs of the entire student body at UCSB, it also contributes to important critical and cultural studies of contemporary American society. As such, it addresses academic issues especially relevant in these times of racial and ethnic tensions evident nationally and internationally.

This is why we seek to clarify some of the controversies surrounding the department that the News-Press editorial addresses. The issue ultimately is not one of racial intolerance. It is one of department integrity and academic freedom.

In part, the controversy arises from the ways in which a relatively new academic discipline becomes established and the ways that establishment is contested.

We offer a few basic facts which contradict the inflammatory opinions voiced by the News-Press.

With regard to the chairship: Professor Yolanda Broyles-Gonzalez' performance as department chair was evaluated in February, 1994, by the department faculty. Without dissent, the faculty reported enthusiastically on what we deemed her “superior performance as chair.” Based on the excellence of her performance, the administration approved a merit increase effective July 1, 1994.

If the faculty and the administration has maintained Broyles-Gonzalez in the chairship for four years it is because of her productive and visionary leadership. The record indicates how, in spite of limited resources, the department had been functioning effectively in matters essential to its productivity.

In the two years preceding the hunger strike, the department hired the first two full time faculty members in its history, completed the work of drafting a preliminary Ph.D. proposal for review by the university, continued its groundbreaking curricular reform and unanimously approved a new academic plan, which significantly reconceptualizes the discipline of Chicano studies.

Current media references to a “troubled” or “divided department,” to “issues of division” or to racially “intolerant” students deflect attention from the real issues of due governance, academic freedom, and the equitable distribution of resources.

After the May 1994 hunger strike the administration planned to appoint part-time faculty against the vote of the department, a clear violation of the university appointment process. Soon after this vote Don Zimmerman recommended Broyles-Gonzalez not be reappointed, again in violation of university due process.

Last week the department issued an open letter, which establishes that historically the department has been treated as an illegitimate member of the institution, both with regard to resources and to the rights guaranteed to all departments. It is unprecedented, for example, that a productive department like ours would be taken into administrative custody, especially as an outcome of student protest directed in part at strengthening the department.

The issue of faculty retention has always been prime. The current round of student unrest began in January, 1994, with student and faculty demands for the retention of Professor Antonia Castañeda Faculty who have resigned from the department and UCSB cite the university's inadequate and poor treatment of affirmative action and of the department as a chief reason of their departure. These include Lupe San Miguel and Rosa Linda Fregoso and Ramon Favela. Still, the institution has not moved expeditiously on the retention case of Castañeda.

Premio Aztlán

Premio Aztlán is a national literary prize established for the purpose of encouraging and rewarding writers at the onset of their writing careers. This one thousand dollar premio in literatura Chicana was begun in 1993. Alba's The Mystery of Survival was the 1993 winner. Any writer or publisher may submit five copies of a work of fiction published in 1994. Writers at the beginning of their careers are defined as those who have only two books of fiction in publication. The 1994 publication may be the second book. The writer's current vita must also be submitted.

Books and vita must be received by December 31, 1994. The vita must clearly show all of the writer's publications. The award will be made in the spring of 1995, and the winner will present a public reading at the University of New Mexico.

Prior winners may not submit again. Any questions related to entries will be decided by the judges. The judges may choose not to award a premio.

Premio Aztlán was established by Patricia and Rudolfo Anaya. Please submit books and vita to:

NEWS FROM

THE MIDWEST NACS

The XICANO CONFERENCE: A RETURN TO NUESTRA COMUNIDAD was held on November 11-12, 1994 at the Minneapolis campus of the University of Minnesota. The conference was sponsored by La Raza Student Culture Center, the Chicano Studies Program Department, the American Studies Program and other university departments and offices. Close to 150 students and faculty from Midwest universities attended the conference.

Keynote speaker, Priscilla Falcon, University of Colorado, spoke on "El Movimiento de Liberacion Nacional" to an enthusiastic audience. Poet and activist Raul Salinas was another keynote speaker warmly received. The focus of many of the workshop sessions was Chicanos/as and the community.

1995 NACS National Conference

Student Participation

Students planning on attending the 1995 NACS National Conference should come prepared for three days of information sharing, work and fun. Students from every region will have the opportunity to participate in their FOCO meeting as well as in the National Business Meeting and Student Plenary. Elections of Regional Representative will take place during the FOCO Meetings and two new National Student Representatives will be selected from the newly elected officials.

The Student Plenary scheduled for the Saturday of the conference will also offer students a chance to dialogue with the Student Coordinating Committee. We are currently accepting proposals from students interested in being the keynote speaker for the event. Proposals should be 500 words in length and should parallel the theme for this year's conference. Proposals should be mailed no later than January 31, 1995 to:

For more information or comments contact Steve Magallan at the same address above.

During the business meeting, the membership approved the proposal from the Ramada Congress Hotel, Chicago, as the site for NACS '96 national conference. The date: March 20-23, 1996. Discussion regarding the NACS '96 Conference Committee will be the major agenda item for the Spokane Midwest FOCO business meeting. The nomination of officers also took place (Treasurer: Miguel Carranza; Secretary: Dennes Valdes; Regional Rep: Irene Campos Carr). Wayne Alejandro Wolbert submitted a formal proposal to have the University of Michigan host the fall 1995 NACS Midwest FOCO conference. The University of Iowa was also propose as a site. After much discussion, Michigan was approved as the '95 FOCO conference host. University of Wisconsin-Madison and the University of Iowa are interested in sponsoring the 1996 FOCO conference.

Discussion regarding students' travel to Spokane was initiated by Jorge Castillo, University of Iowa, who proposed a collective effort to find funding for the national conference. Students met to discuss ideas for presenting panels and workshops that might gain support from their departments. The students also suggested jointly chartering a bus to start in the eastern section of the Midwest and stop at various locations along the way en route to Spokane. The contact person is Kevin Chavez, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, 1626 "D" Street, #204, Lincoln, NE 68502; (402) 477-9571.

The following resolutions were approved by the Midwest FOCO membership and will be brought to NACS '95:

1. To boycott California as a site for national conferences in response to Proposition 187. NACS will boycott all conferences in California and name a committee to contact other groups to boycott California until Proposition 187 is overturned.
2. To offer support for the EZLN.
3. To demand that Governor Edgar of Illinois to free Manuel Salazar, who has been held illegally.

NACS Foco Meeting

A committee composed primarily of UT students is organizing the next Texas Regional Foco Meeting of the National Association for Chicano Studies. The meeting, entitled "Putting Chicano Studies on the Map: Community and Campus Creating Change," will take place February 18-19 at the University of Texas at Austin. Interested high school students, undergraduates, graduate students, faculty, staff, administrators, and community members throughout Texas are invited to attend. There will be roundtable discussions as well as formal presentations. All intended to promote dialogue about the current situation of Texas Mexicans within the education system and the community. Possible topics for discussion include environmental racism, sexism and homophobia, the commitment of Chicano Studies to the community, and Internet resources for Chicano Studies. For registration and other information, please contact NACS Texas Foco Meeting, Texas Union Box 108, P. O. Box 7338, Austin, TX 78713, or Raul Coronado Jr at (512) 440-1972.

Boise State University
Department of Sociology

Boise State University invites applications for a full-time, tenure-track position at the Assistant Professor level in Sociology to implement a new minor in Mexican American Studies (contingent on availability of funding). The MAS minor will offer a concentrated course of study in Mexican American culture, both in historical and contemporary perspective. We seek a Ph.D. sociologist with demonstrated competence in this field, including an ability to speak Spanish (ABDs who will have their Ph.D. completed by August, 1995, are also encouraged to apply). The successful candidate will be expected to teach courses in Sociology as well as in the Mexican American Studies minor. The Latino community is the fastest growing minority group in Idaho, creating exciting new leadership, program development, and research opportunities. We seek a candidate who can relate directly to this dynamic community. Minorities and women are especially encouraged to apply.
Salary is competitive and commensurate with qualifications. Submit a letter of application, curriculum vitae, examples of writings, and three letters of reference to:

Report from the Chicana Caucus:

The Chicana Caucus anticipates an exciting conference in Spokane. We look forward to meeting with mujeres from across the country. We welcome new friends, especially undergraduates, graduate students and community women. For the first time in a decade we will hold a luncheon rather than a 7 am breakfast. Our meeting this year will be a gathering and celebration, several special events will honor women.

We would like to thank the Site Committee for cooperating with us and assuring that the needs and interests of women are met. Special thanks to Maria Montes de Oca Ricks, our Northwestern Chicana Caucus representative; Guadalupe Friaz, a veterana; and the other women and men we have yet to meet who are working for our needs. We also welcome Yolanda Chavez Leyva as the new Lesbian Caucus chair who has been working to ensure a pleasant atmosphere for our lesbian sisters.

Let's go to Spokane to reinvigorate our support for one another. Let's talk about our sexuality. Let's talk about sexual harassment. And let's meet our Northwestern sisters.

The News-Press editorial claims that students are "impressionable," manipulated," racially "intolerant" and that they attack Zimmerman "for not being Latino."

Numerous student groups including: the Associated Students Legislative Council; the A.S. Women's Commission; Akanke; the U.C. Student Association; the U.S. Student Association; and MEChA Central have protested the manner in which Zimmerman was appointed and the ways in which the department's rights have been suspended. These various student groups protest in the name of just governance and academic freedom. Only within the current political climate of backlash, epitomized by the passage of Proposition 187, can these students be so irresponsibly scapegoated.

Many organizations have examined the facts surrounding the current situation of the department. They have unanimously censured the UCBS administration and have demanded appropriate redress. These organizations include the American Federation of Teachers, the National Association for Chicano Studies, Casa de La Raza, Latinos for a Better Government, Mujeres Unidas, Mexican American Political Association, Families Unidas, Mexicanos Unidos, El Concilio Del Pueblo, One-Stop Immigration, the National Latina Health Association, and many more.

Similarly, the California Latino Legislative Caucus has vigorously protested the administration's actions and currently demands an investigation from the office of the President, as well as a program of action that will allow the University of California to serve all its constituencies.

The issue of Chicana/o faculty retention has been an ongoing problem at UCSB. The current opportunity to retain one of the leading scholars of Chicano studies, Antonia Castañeda, is of the highest priority for the department and represents a positive opportunity for strengthening the department and moving forward.

It is generally perceived that the controversy involving the department began with Acuña vs. the University of California. It did not. Nor did it originate with the current chairship issue.

Since its inception 25 years ago, Chicana and Chicano students and faculty have struggled within institutional structures and practices that have maintained the department on the margins. For 25 years the department has been sustained as the smallest of all campus departments. The current protests and the hunger strike demands of last May are virtually identical to the demands raised by the 1974 litigation brought as a class action suit against UCSB. That litigation cited the university's failure to serve all constituencies and the tokenization of the department.

Finally, the News-Press states that the department has "about 34 students" as majors when it has nearly double that amount. Under Broyles-Gonzalez' chairship, the department has tripled the number of majors.

We look forward to a future in which the department no longer has to be distracted by seemingly incessant interventions, accusations, and organizational disputes. Rather than recreate recrimination, we instead reiterate our goal of building a stronger department, which can focus its energies on the creative academic work that is its charge.

We take seriously our mission to educate the students of California so that the types of racial, gender and ethnic misunderstandings and attacks that have characterized the current controversy can be finally laid to rest.

We look forward to working with the new administration in order to achieve these most necessary and pressing goals.
NACS Student Premio Competition
NACS 22 Annual Conference - Spokane, WA
Expanding Raza World View; Sexuality and Regionalism
March 29 - April 1, 1995

The National Association for Chicano/a Studies announces its annual Frederick Cervantes Undergraduate and Graduate Student Premio Competition. A three hundred fifty dollar award plus consideration for publication in the NACS conference proceedings are given to the best undergraduate and graduate student papers. Papers will be judged on originality, content, and mechanics.

Competition Requirements:
Participants must be enrolled at an institution of higher education and be members of NACS. To join the association write to:

NACS National Office
Eastern Washington University
Monroe Hall 202
MS-170
Cheney, WA 99004

All papers must focus on a Chicano/a Studies topic and seek to contribute to Chicano/a Studies as an interdisciplinary area of study. Three copies of each paper are required. Papers should follow well-accepted guidelines of term papers, and should be fully referenced, typed and double spaced. Papers should be 5 to 25 pages of length.

Each paper should have a title page with the author's full name, address, institutional affiliation and telephone number. The title should appear on the title page and again on the first page of the paper.

Each paper should be clearly marked UNDERGRADUATE or GRADUATE. Lack of clear identification of competition category will disqualify the paper from competition.

Papers should be postmarked no later than Feb. 1, 1995. Late papers will not be accepted. Send three copies to:

Awards will be presented during the NACS conference 95'.

Call for Nominations for the 1995 NACS Scholar Award

The National Association for Chicano Studies invite nominations for the NACS Scholar Award.
The NACS Scholar Award was established in 1981 to recognize the contributions of scholars to Chicano/a Studies.
Criteria for recognition includes:

1. A scholar’s involvement in the development of Chicano/a Studies as a discipline; and/or
2. Their contribution to scholarly research and writing on the Mexican population in the U.S.

The individual selected as a NACS Scholar is awarded a lifetime paid membership in NACS. Additionally, the honored NACS Scholar’s registration fee is waived during the year of the award.

All nominations are required to emerge through the Foco Regions structure and Caucuses. Nomination packets should include the nominee’s vita and an explanation as to how the nominee fulfills the selection criteria.

Please mail NACS Scholar Nominations by February 28, 1995 to:

Luis Torres
NACS General Coordinator
English and Chicano Studies
University of Southern Colorado
Pueblo, Colorado 81001-4901
Ph. (719) 549-2082

Contingent on the NACS Coordinating Committee’s review and approval, the presentation of the NACS Scholar Award will be made during the NACS conference luncheon scheduled for March 31, 1995.
1984 marks the 10th anniversary of the 1984 NACS conference. That year the first conference on women was held in Austin, Texas. It was also the first formal gathering of the Chicana Caucus. What follows below are excerpts from "Voces de la Mujer: A Report of the 1984 NACS Conference," by Cynthia Orozco, Isabel Vasquez Camarena, and Merrihelen Ponce Adame which appeared in \textit{La Gente}, the UCLA Chicano student newspaper in April 1984.

The first conference by NACS addressing women's studies in its twelve year brought women and men from across the nation to discuss a feminist agenda. The meeting resulted from the struggle of a small group of feminists who united in 1983 to form the Chicana Caucus. These Chicanas discussed that gender had not received attention, and that this lack of attention attested to the inferior position of women in Chicano Studies nationally and the absence of a developed feminist consciousness among Chicanas.

Though newly formed, the Chicana Caucus requested of the Austin, Texas site committee that the 1984 conference theme be "Voces de la Mujer" and that its focus be on gender inequality and the positive contributions of Mexican women.

Various differences about conference plans emerged but one issue highlighted the attempt to depoliticize the feminist agenda. A Caucus member suggested that the plenary theme highlight sexism in Chicano Studies, but the site committee went on to select the theme of women and higher education.

On March 8-10, about 500 people attended the meeting. The Mexican American Studies Center of UT should be commended on the event's impressive size and organization. Participants chose from 61 panels, 25 of which related to gender.

About 250 individuals actually presented in the program and about half were women. To date, this is the best representation of women at NACS, and it shows the great progress since the 1975 Austin meeting when only 1 participant out of 30 was female. In addition, almost half of the panel chairs and discussants were women. The enthusiastic response can be explained by the fact that NACS is experiencing growth but also because of the theme on women. To our knowledge, it was the first national Chicano Studies conference to address gender.

AN OPEN DISCUSSION ON SEXISM; CONSTRUCTING A CHICANA FEMINISM

Originally planned to be a major event, this session was given equal stature to others. The results of the panel attested to the notion that there are two foundations in constructing feminism: one built by women and one built by women and men. Enough men attended the session to alter plans of a women's agenda.

Beatriz Pesquiera stressed the significance of gender and noted that were important similarities between professional women and working class women. Responding to the comment that men are not the enemy, she said "men in fact do act that way."

Several men proposed the notion of intersection rather than primacy. They informed the audience, that "male colleagues did not like to hear about the primacy of sexism."

Mike Solis stated that "militant feminists" believed that a true feminist had to be "homosexual." Most women asked him to define "militant" feminism but he could not. Teresa Cordova said that such a school of thought actually existed. Solis continued, "Sadly, I lack knowledge in the sexual habits of Chicanas. Is there a high incidence of homosexuality among Chicana feminists as in the case of white feminists? Is it an integral part of the movement or is it just a footnote?" The questions elicited awe and anger. One woman responded arguing heterosexual Chicanas stood in solidarity with lesbians and noted that heterosexuality is compulsory and that sexuality is a political issue. Walt Walden ended the session by calling for a gay and lesbian caucus within NACS.

PLENARY SESSION: GENDER AND EQUALITY; CHICANAS IN HIGHER EDUCATION AND SOCIETY

Moderator Margarita Melville opened the session noting that it was "an attempt to be positive and constructive" and that "equality is the goal." She highlighted the insistent challenge by women in NACS and noted that change was occurring.

Cynthia Orozco revised El Plan de Santa Barbara, the rationale for Chicano Studies and called it "El Plan de Santa y Barbara" to encompass feminist ideals.

Alma Garcia noted that the question of primacy of "which factor (race, class, gender) affected women more, a better question to ask is how the three variables are "mutually reinforcing and interdependent" since they are not autonomous structures."

RECEPTION: TRIBUTE TO MANUELA SOLIS SAGER AND EMMA TENAYUCA

A tribute by the UCLA Chicano Studies Research Center (CSRC) to honor labor organizers Manuela Solis Sager and Emma Tenayuca added a special delight to the conference. Every year, NACS honors individuals who have contributed to the field of Chicano Studies and have worked for the community. Sra. Solis Sager and Tenayuca were the first women bestowed this NACS honor. After the informative presentations and slide show by CSRC representatives Emilio Zamora and Roberto Calderon focusing on labor activism in Texas in the 30s, the fiery Tenayuca spoke.

All listeners felt privileged to hear this woman of whom much has been written. She talked about her childhood and how she began participating in labor activity. Sra. Solis Sager advised Chicano scholars, "El mensaje que debemos dejar pa' los educadores es muy simple, al investigar la clase obrera Mexicana hay que estudiarlo como lo que somos obreros! Y al estudiar a los obreros hay que entender nuestras luchas contra el imperialismo, nuestras luchas contra las industrias, nuestras luchas contra las universidades y en las areas agricolas. Pero al estudiar tambien hay que participar en esas luchas, no se debe estudiarlo solamente." Leticia Lopez captured these speeches on video.

BUSINESS MEETING

While an atmosphere of understanding and good will prevailed at the plenary, male opposition coalesced at the business meeting where actual change would occur.

An organizer argued that women were a "special interest" and compared women to "the Midwest."

Teresa Cordova of UC Berkeley noted that she was the first and only woman ever elected to the NACS editorial board.
