DEPARTMENT OF CHICANA/O STUDIES

Ph.D. Program in Chicana/o Studies

Applications Available in September 2015

Graduate study in the Chávez Department provides the students with the interdisciplinary research tools necessary to advance knowledge in the field, provide academic leadership, and serve community needs with academic resources. Graduate students in Chicana/o Studies are trained to critically analyze the life, history, and culture of Chicana/o and other Latina/o groups in the United States in the context of an increasingly complex global, transnational society and help shape the future direction of its academic discourse. Our location in Los Angeles, home to several Latina/o groups as well as the largest Mexican-origin community in the country, places us in a unique position to draw from this large and diverse population - its social experiences, historical realities, cultural practices, and literary and artistic productions.
